

A Memorial of Egypt, the Red Sea, the Wildernesses of Sin and Paran, Mount Sinai, Jerusalem and Other Principal Localities of the Holy Land: Visited ... Naples, Constantinople, and Up the Danube

Excerpt from A Memorial of Egypt, the Red Sea, the Wildernesses of Sin and Paran, Mount Sinai, Jerusalem and Other Principal Localities of the Holy Land: Visited in 1842; With Brief Notes of a Route Through France, Rome, Naples, Constantinople, and Up the Danube I think it right to avow, what the intelligent reader will, however, soon discover for himself, that as a literary production, this book is of small pretension. It is a sketch, and nothing more - just what its title indicates; and primarily intended to give my flock some instructive idea of the way in which the interval of my absence from them was spent. As a Pastors familiar narrative, it contains many particulars in which the public cannot be expected to sympathize as those will who are so personally related to me. My journey occupied something less than eight months - a space of time affording but little opportunity for adding to those stores of information already extant - the production of gifted authors, who taken altogether, may be said to have nearly exhausted most of the topics on which I have briefly touched in passing.
